Report of Field Survey to Gangani by Geography students on 09.08.2023

Place – Gangani, Garbeta, Paschim Medinipur, WB

Geography is a field science, just like many other disciplines. Therefore, a well-planned field survey is always required to augment a geographical inquiry. Our knowledge of spatial distribution patterns, their linkages, and relationships at the local level is improved by these surveys. Furthermore, field surveys make it easier to gather local-level data that cannot be obtained through secondary sources. Therefore, field surveys are conducted to collect the necessary data so that the subject under inquiry can be researched in depth in accordance with the established objectives.

As a part of the curriculum, Geography students of session 2022-24 went for field survey to Gangani, Garbeta, Paschim Medinipur, WB to collect primary and secondary data regarding Socio-Economic status from the locality of Gangani. Gangani, also referred to as the "Grand Canyon of Bengal," is a well-known picnic and tourism destination near the town of Garhbeta in the Paschim Medinipur district, 55 kilometres from the city of Midnapore. Natural hills surround the Shilabati River, also called the "Shilai River" locally. Total 08 participants were engaged in the survey along with their supervisor. After reaching at Gangani, students has started survey work in the village where they have collected primary data regarding Socio-Economic status.

Field survey at Gangani

Again in the 2nd half of the day all the students moved to Gangani Badland area which is known as Grand Canyon of West Bengal. Observation of the area was done by recording all activities with the villagers, school children & teachers of localities and secondary data was collected from the Panchayet office and forest Bit Office of that area. Most of the data was collected to see the cultivation, forest collection, and picnic scenario and tourism culture. Cultivation of china nut, paddy, and seasonal vegetables were the features of the place. The survey was end at 5 pm and returned to Bishnupur by 7 pm. The data thus collected will be analyzed and will publish in the Journal.
