Report on Blood Donation Camp on 23.07.2026

Introduction: Together with the Blood Bank of Bishnupur District Hospital, the NSS Unit of Nikhil Banga Sikshan Mahavidyalaya organized a voluntary blood donation camp. The program's goals were to raise awareness of the value of voluntary blood donation and motivate staff, instructors, students, and alumni to support this admirable cause.

The principal, the NSS Program Officer, faculty members, and notable visitors spoke to the attendees during the program's opening session. They emphasized that one unit of donated blood can save multiple lives and that blood cannot be produced artificially. The health advantages and safety precautions of blood donation were also explained to volunteers.

All donors had medical screening before to the donation procedure, which included measurements of their body weight, blood pressure, hemoglobin level, and general health. The Blood Bank's medical staff made sure that everything was done in a clean and safe manner. Following their donation, all qualified donors received certificates of appreciation and refreshments. Students, instructors, alumni, and non-teaching staff all responded enthusiastically to the camp. Twenty-three first-time donors participated in the program, and a total of sixty-two units of blood were collected, including donations from three female donors. The Bishnupur District Hospital Blood Bank received the collected blood to assist in meeting patients' urgent requirements.

Conclusion: The participants' sense of community duty, humanity, and social responsibility were all effectively fostered by the Blood Donation Camp. It increased awareness of voluntary blood donation and motivated many students to donate blood on a regular basis going forward. A vote of gratitude to the medical staff, volunteers, instructors, and all donors for making the event a huge success marked the program's conclusion.
